

ABSTRACT

A method of managing a complex task is organized around a central outline, which starts with all of the possible subtasks and which is pared to remove non-relevant subtasks.

The paring occurs during an initial profiling of the task. Further paring occurs manually.

5 Other tools, such as automated document production and data warehousing, are integrated.